

What we believe...

- All adults over 18 should be having conversations with their loved ones about the type of health care they might wish to receive if they are ever in a situation where they can't speak for themselves.
- These conversations should happen early and often – around the kitchen table and not in the ICU.
- All wishes are acceptable. TCP has no preference for what someone's wishes should be – no wish is right or wrong. We aim to be person-centered and value-neutral.
- TCP is neutral on the subject of aid-in-dying legislation and debate.

How we work with community partners...

- We abide by the motto “all teach, all learn.” We don't hold all of the answers, nor do we believe there is one “right” way to spread this work.
- We learn alongside our community partners and encourage a collaborative spirit. We do not have exclusive relationships with any entity.
- We strive to intentionally engage all demographics in this work-- age, sex, religion, race, ethnicity, etc.
- We aim to give credit to those who develop new ideas and expect attribution by others for TCP-created materials.
- Our resources can be used in addition to many other tools. We want to encourage more conversations and see this work as upstream to many other wonderful approaches.
